

ASHBY CARTER (left) national president of the National Alliance of Postal Employees, makes Birmingham, Ala., one of his chief stops during his tour of the deep South. He talks with, (left to right) Bernard Bennett, T. H. Roser, A. Frank Smart and S. D. Faye.

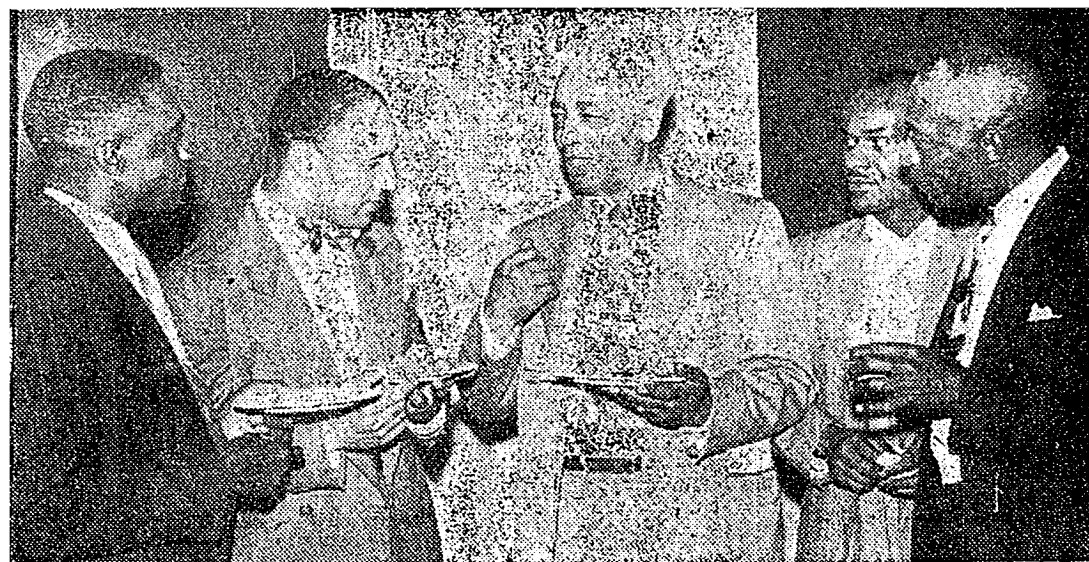

A SPECIAL DRIVE is now underway to get a Negro appointed to the post of supervisor in Louisville. There are three in the South, Carter pointed out — one in Houston, Texas, and two in Jacksonville, Fla. There are two Negro postmasters — one at Tuskegee, Ala., and the other in New Jersey. Here, Carter (center) talks with W. S. Parrish, Walter Hennessee, railway postal clerk; L. E. Jackson and G. R. Johnston.

AIM OF CARTER'S TOUR is to have series of conferences with postmasters in South regarding employment of more Negroes as postal clerks and supervisors. Talking over progress are, left to right, M. B. Wynne, president of the Birmingham branch; Carter, and R. D. Jones, district president. Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi.

RELAXING OVER REFRESHMENTS are, left to right: Frank Jackson, recording secretary and reporter, Birmingham

branch; George E. Harris, Carter. H. L. Mosely and Ed Harrison. — DeMille photos.